Steve King: "White nationalist, white supremacist, Western civilization — how did that language become offensive?"

Predictably, Robert Spencer retweets King instead of condemning him. At its core, the #Islamophobia Industry shares King's white supremacist worldview.

My statement on the New York Times article.

"Today, the New York Times is suggesting that I am an advocate for white nationalism and white supremacy. I want to make one thing abundantly clear; I reject those labels and the evil ideology that they define. Further, I condemn anyone that supports this evil and bigoted ideology which saw in its ultimate expression the systematic murder of 6 million innocent Jewish lives.

It's true that like the Founding Fathers I am an advocate for Western Civilization's values, and that I profoundly believe that America is the greatest tangible expression of these ideals the World has ever seen. Under any fair political definition, I am simply a Nationalist. America's values are expressed in our founding documents; they are attainable by everyone and we take pride that people of all races, religions, and creeds from around the globe aspire to achieve them. I am dedicated to keeping America this way.

This conviction does not make me a white nationalist or a white supremacist. Once again, I reject those labels and the ideology that they define. As I told the New York Times, "It's not about race; it's never been about race." One of my most strongly held beliefs is that we are all created in God's image and that human life is sacred in all its forms."
